As of today, Firefox updates its new Windows builds with the first version of version 26, and in line with Windows 10 Redstone 4 builds, the browser offers a Windows Hello sign-in experience. The new build is available for download via the official Firefox download page, but it's only in progress at the moment, as the new build is marked as "a bit" or "a lot" under the Windows 10 version, as Mozilla's Tom Hancock notes in his blog post. Hancock indicates that the first version of version 26 has a few changes compared to the Windows build of version 25.9.3. Those changes, apart from the Windows Hello authentication feature, are the integration of the Windows Configuration Data registry, a new theme engine, the introduction of tabs suggestions and a new "persistent menu bar". Some of the features in the Windows version of Firefox 26 are the same as the Android version, like the "Persistent menu bar", where Firefox automatically displays the name of the current tab and the tabs that have recently been opened. This functionality is known as the "Persistent menu bar" in the Android version and the name "Quick tabs" in Firefox for iOS. Additionally, the latest update to the Web interface includes the "Ribbon bar", which allows users to quickly access Firefox's most useful features using an interface that looks similar to the Android's "toolbar" widget. In addition, you can have tabs suggestions displayed in the menu bar, similar to the Google Chrome. Other changes in the new build of Firefox include the rendering of the Windows 10's "tiles" interface. Tiles provide information about the currently active app, such as the name, a quick preview of the app's content, and a button to launch it. There are other changes in the new build of Firefox 26 that are not present in the Android version. The first change to take note of is the "Font family switcher", which allows users to change the font size and color from the Settings page. The first version of version 26

What's New In Dark Theme For Chrome?

The extension provides you with a stylish dark theme for your browser, while at the same time makes it easier to search and bookmark sites, navigate easily, and check your e-mail. If you use an Android smartphone or tablet, you will probably want to have a dark theme to go with the dark mode in the operating system. The following are five of the best dark themes for Android. These themes are all super easy to apply and look great. Many of the options are customizable and you can adjust the theme to look exactly how you want it to. Of course, all of the options are listed here, so you can pick the one that is best for you. Unofficial Magisk Module One of the most popular themes is the default theme of Magisk, which is available for any version of the Android operating system. The default Magisk theme is dark and has beautiful artwork throughout. You can change the theme of the Magisk module and even create your own. Our favorite themes for Android This theme was created specifically for the Galaxy S9 by XDA user Lucid, and it is extremely easy to apply. It is super dark with beautiful artwork, so it looks great with the dark mode on most devices. The theme is extremely customizable and you can even replace the text with your own. This is one of the easiest themes to apply, making it a great choice for most users. This theme was created by XDA user Magician123 for the OnePlus 6. The theme is dark, with beautiful artwork throughout, and it is also very customizable. The theme is super easy to apply. The only thing you may have to do is manually enable dark mode, because the theme does not currently work with the dark mode already enabled on your phone. The theme is super easy to apply. There is a manual for those who are a little more technical, but we highly recommend checking out the app on the Play Store. Unofficial ZUPT Module The ZUPT module is a very well-known theme for those who want a dark theme without a ton of customizations. This is one of the most simplistic themes, and you can even download it for free. Unfortunately, it is not one of our favorites. The icons on the launcher and the homepage are a bit too small, and the design is a little boring. If you are looking for a simple dark theme, it is a great choice. Black Launcher If you are looking for a simple, dark theme that makes your launcher look black, we recommend checking out this theme. You can create your own, and it can also be modified to look more or less how you want. This is also a great theme to apply to the Google Play Music app. The dark theme is extremely easy to apply, so it should be a breeze for you. The theme is free to download and is also the default theme for the Google Play Music app.
