Modified da Vinci Surgical System for bilateral robot-assisted laparoscopic prostatectomy: early experience of a novel surgical platform. The use of da Vinci Robot System (Intuitive Surgical, Sunnyvale, CA) in urology has gained acceptance. We have performed an initial evaluation of our modified da Vinci surgical platform with the Da Vinci (Robot version 1.3). The modification has included the addition of the standard console, the addition of the surgeon console, and a 5-mm camera. We have used this system to perform bilateral robot-assisted laparoscopic prostatectomy in 5 patients. Two patients underwent simultaneous bilateral robot-assisted laparoscopic radical prostatectomy and the other 3 patients underwent unilateral robot-assisted laparoscopic prostatectomy. The mean operating time was 249.4 (range, 190 to 415) minutes and there were no intraoperative complications. There were no conversions to open prostatectomy or open retropubic radical prostatectomy. The mean estimated blood loss was 175 mL. All patients underwent bilateral successful radical prostatectomy. The median length of hospital stay was 2.4 days (range, 2 to 4 days) and the average time to return to work was 4.8 days. All patients were able to have sexual intercourse after surgery. There were no intraoperative or postoperative complications and no evidence of ileus on plain abdominal films. This preliminary series showed no new technical or surgical difficulty in performing bilateral robot-assisted laparoscopic radical prostatectomy. Because of the initial simplicity of the Da Vinci system, the total learning curve might be reduced. Further experience is needed.

Pages Wednesday, June 18, 2010 I'm really tired of being on the list, so be assured, I will reply to everyone who has said they missed me. I'm sorry that I have been MIA again! I went to the YWAM camp yesterday. Those of you who have not heard of them will have fun understanding what I'm talking about. I met some girls and boys who have the same qualities as I do (INFECTIOUS, SPINY, AND STUBBORN). I need a new nickname. I spent a good amount of time teaching. All the kids I had were ones that I thought would be good for me (since I was replacing my broken sister, and they were ones that didn't know much about me). I went to the campus for about 3 days

Category Archives: Horror “I saw a vague feeling in my brain/Something was moving in a way I never saw before/I pressed my face against the window to watch the night/And I saw a great big monster and the monster was me...” “Love me.” Lyrics by The Smiths. Sometimes, listening to “Love me,” I find myself, in the middle of a hot and humid day, at home, on my sofa, wearing nothing but a T-shirt, feeling like I’ve been swimming for a year. With my heart beating so fast in my chest that it feels like it might explode, I lay in front of the television and stare at the screen, a red beam of light filling my vision. I lay in the hospital room, on the bed, on the floor, on the daybed, on the hard chair, on the slanted bit of table, and on the floor itself. I watch the television with that certain kind of lustful longing that’s only possible when you’re alone. The nurse is looking at me, but she does not speak. This won’t last. The background of the film is clear and white, while the images in focus are murky, sometimes in black and white, more often in color, the details of which are vague. The music is heavy, the sound thumping and bass-heavy, with muted and harsh strings and sounds like howling, shrieking winds. The images are blurry at times, tearing the frame, and then they become clear and apparent. The music becomes louder, the sound is more intense, and the images begin to turn into a reel of bloody, bloody, bloody horror. Tylenol, a combination of acetaminophen and the narcotic and anti-inflammatory drug, is the first over-the-counter, non-prescription, and non-steroidal drug developed for relief of fever, pain, and inflammation. On the front of the orange bottle reads the phrase “Take as directed.” I took some of this drug a few years ago. I had some sort of brain infection, and my head felt like it was boiling and that the flames were about to burst out of my ears and nose. I took a couple of Tylenol and then laid down to sleep. When I woke the next morning, I felt like I was better. Here’s a
