The Adobe website, www.adobe.com/photoshop, has a wealth of tutorials available to get you started. You can access the Photoshop tutorial areas as you work through the tutorials. As the name implies, professional photographers use Photoshop for workflow and manipulation processes. Unlike Photoshop, Photoshop Elements is free to use, starting with version 11, but it's also limited in terms of its features. You may use the same image editing tools (resolution and color adjustments, quick adjustment layers, healing, etc.), but you won't be able to access advanced features such as layers with multiple editing states, or 3D effects. If you want to have the same incredible results as Photoshop, you'll need to pay $19 per year or $179 for three years. But if you are not very good at editing photos, you don't really need a high-end editing software. If you don't edit photos on a regular basis, Photoshop elements is a great option. The version that you are using can be updated every two years. You can either buy the yearly subscription or the three-year subscription. Former Sunderland teen jailed for gang rape Published duration 16 January 2012 media caption The BBC's Richard Tomkins says the trial was held in secret at Newcastle Crown Court A former teenage Sunderland schoolboy who groomed a 13-year-old girl before raping her has been jailed. Roland Crawford, a 16-year-old loner who was known as "The Man from Ravenswick" because of his accent, abused the girl for four months at his home. The 15-year-old girl was lured to an isolated spot in the city after exchanging text messages with Crawford. He later gave evidence in court at a trial that was held in secret, the BBC's Newcastle reporter says. The girl, who cannot be named for legal reasons, has had counselling and taken time off school. The pair met after they exchanged text messages in March last year, the court heard. She claims that Crawford told her he "loved her" and repeatedly asked her to meet him at the secluded spot near the city's Quayside Marina. When she told her parents she was going to be at a friend's house on the evening of Friday 30 March, the girl told the court she later went to Crawford's home. A taxi driver found her drunk, naked and crying at the front door of Crawford's house the following morning. Crawford was charged with rape and indecent assault. 'Consumed by jealousy' His defence said he was "a bullied individual" who attempted to manipulate the girl. But Mr Justice Paneth described him as "more than a bullying individual" and told him: "You were consumed by jealousy of the victim, you sought to possess her sexually, and you raped her. "Because of the violence of that act you feel and suffer a crippling sense of shame and guilt and have a permanent damage to your self-esteem. You can never live down the shame of what you did." During the trial, Crawford admitted attempting to rape the girl but denied the other charges. The judge accepted Crawford's claim that they had both been drinking that night, and told him: "You were capable of arguing with the victim, although you failed to maintain your temper." He also recognised that Crawford was "suffering from the effects of alcohol". The judge told him that he would be sentenced to two years in a young offenders institution with an extended licence period
