In one of such image input devices, this enormous amount of pixels is realized by installing a plurality of optical lenses and converting an object image formed through each of the optical lenses to an electrical signal. However, with the image input device having such a configuration, the entire size of the device becomes large. For this reason, there has been developed an image input device that allows reduction in the entire size thereof without reducing the number of pixels and the resolution. In an image input device (camera) disclosed in PTL 1, reduction in the entire size thereof is realized by projecting an object image onto a film surface with a plurality of optical systems that form object images different from each other, and image-processing means that image-processes the object images onto which an optical image is projected to output an electrical signal.Q: Access SQL list from multiple tables I am trying to create a a form to access details from 2 different table. What I am trying to do is: Field Type = list Reference Type = list I want to select the reference type from the database and then list them out in the field type dropdown. Can someone help with the coding? A: If I understand your question, and if these are Field Type and Reference Type values that you want to access, but you only want these to be listed once per form in the dropdown, you could do something like: SELECT 'Field Type' AS TypeName UNION ALL SELECT 'Reference Type' In the drop down that displays the results, you could use a for loop to list out the results like so: SELECT * FROM (SELECT 'Field Type' AS TypeName UNION ALL SELECT 'Reference Type') q Smart card systems can access a plurality of remote databases. Typically, the remote databases include source data from the web and fixed database data. Some databases receive updates from multiple data sources and are called data and event-driven. A smart card embedded system has a short period of time to read this data from the database, update the data in the smart card's 6d1f23a050
